Pritzker Says Past Accomplishments Will Guide Future Success
State of the State Address Focuses On Investing In People: “Illinois is great because our people are great”

Highlighting the accomplishments of the past year and focusing on priorities such as ethics reform, Governor JB Pritzker delivered the annual State of State Address at the State Capitol on Wednesday.

Pritzker highlighted the accomplishments of last year’s historic legislative session – his first – including a $45 billion capital infrastructure plan, record investments in education, a balanced budget, cannabis legalization, and a truly balanced budget that significantly improves the state’s financial outlook.

Pritzker said the capital plan is about more than buildings and roads.

“Rebuild Illinois is about more than just roads, bridges and universities,” Pritzker said. “It’s about jobs – middle class careers with wages and benefits, the kind of jobs that help you raise a family.”

Pritzker recognized Reggie Marizetts, Jr., an apprentice with Laborers’ Local 165 in Peoria, who was in attendance for the speech.

“Gov. Pritzker’s address was about obtaining results for all Illinoisans. For far too long we’ve been subjected to finger-pointing, blame and political rhetoric – while the state sank under the weight of inaction. Gov. Pritzker and the General Assembly went to work last year and now our state is in a much better place. There is still a lot of work to do and issues to address, but the women and men of the Illinois AFL-CIO applaud the work accomplished and stand ready to help Illinois move forward.”

During the address in the House chamber, Pritzker laid out his priorities for this session including, ethics reform for elected officials, passing a balanced budget, education investment, criminal justice reform, clean energy, and property tax reduction.
